

All CGI files must be uploaded and configured to work through the cgi-bin provided in the FTP. Use of other folders for cgi scripts is not allowed!

The reason for this is that the cgi-bin is configured to work using a security measure. Any other configuration puts your web site at risk!

CGI file configuration or scripting that does not follow this protocol or is considered a security risk will be removed. Whenever possible, we'll notify you of any security risk posed by the CGI script you are using and give you an opportunity to replace the script in use with one that is more secure. However, if it's found that your script is a serious security risk we may be forced to remove it immediately and notify you after the fact. This will cause whatever feature your CGI script is running to be inoperable and may cause pages on your web site to not be available to your site visitors.

As a security measure, it's highly recommended that you use PHP scripts instead of CGI scripts whenever possible. PHP is a much more secure programming language than CGI scripting.

Thank you for your cooperation!
